For the ordinary man, but "Uncle Joe" is as extraordinary in this particular as in others. Thirty years of service in the House seems to have given him personal youth. His eye is keen for fact and counts a pleasure in seeking the Democratic and is so, is striking, even sunny. "Uncle Joe" does not mirror himself, either. He works like a Trojan under incessantly, shakes up late if nights, and is altogether, perhaps, the wisest man in Congress. The demands upon his time and strength are incessant. He shakes them off as a Newfoundlander. He is after a bath. "Uncle Joe" comes of Quaker stock, but one would not think so when he is in motion. His vocabulary is picturesque and somewhat of the soil. He is an old-fashioned American — any man who ever left the plow to go up to the halls of Con-

He is not a sham himself, and he does not believe in shams in others. He thinks the United States is a sham, a fraud, a lie, a robbery on its people the best, the government the vilest, and its future the brightest. When "Uncle Joe" is aroused and takes the floor, which is a rare occurrence, he speaks of the "Gentle of our institutions, and with his words he strikes, like a bolt of lightning, the hearts of his hearers, and his firm jaw covered with an undergrowth of beard, he is a living picture of Sam, or the "sagitt of '38."

It must be remembered by the stranger that "Uncle Joe" is not a man of the house, if not sometimes, without a life of his own.

His portions are an enthusiastic as those of La Follette. They belong almost exclusively, of course, to his own State. Truly such intense local worship is founded upon provincialism and instability. Through ignorance, to make true comparisons, is impossible to meet. Occasionally, however, a more springs up where there is not only community but national admiration. Governor Cummins's friends believe he is this sort of a leader, and his voice in the national arena is well heard.

Mr. Bryan Determined Not to Be Taken for a Deadhead and
Rum Ticket

NEW HAVEN, CONN., August 31.—After all, Mr. Bryan took in a private car from New York over the New York and Hartford Railroad, but it wasn't Mr. Bryan's car. It was Edward D. Randolph, McNeill, of New Haven, for the federal committee, which brought the Keenecks leaders here. Mr. Bryan, at the last minute, again refused to allow Charles S. Mollen, president of the railroad, to furnish him with a car, and took one of the chairs to a "barber shop," which he held like any ordinary citizen.

to allow the suspicion that he was a deadhead to get abroad.

Keddy's Affairs

The following are the names of the individuals who are members of the Washington State Bar Association and who are also members of the American Bar Association:

T. Kirk Purcell, of Richmond, for pulling over railroad; C. D. Dwyer for winning machine gunning; assistant to Richmond Color Works.

Rev. R. Hill, of Hopkins, for a toy exhibit.

Prominent Visitors.

Among the prominent visitors in the city last night were Congressman Robert C. Swarthall, of Amelia, and Hon. John J. Owen, of Prince Edward.

the luncheon. At the luncheon the arrangement of tables placed the guests in one which ran across the hall, while from the right angles were six tables, one for each New England State delegation. There were half a hundred. The A. B. C. of the party was constructed. As Mr. Bryan passed into the hall he was loudly cheered, everybody standing, and the more enthusiastic ones climbing upon chairs and waving hats. He pressed forward to shake hands with Mr. Bryan, and there was delay in getting everybody seated, so that luncheon could not be served.

Mr. Wm. Stuller, Lieutenant-Governor Woodruff, ex-Governor Garret, of Rhode Island, and ex-Representative George Felix Williams, of Massachusetts, were the chief guests' nearest neighbors. Among the other guests were Governor Garret, of the Democratic State Central Committee of Ohio, who was cheered.

In the gallery were made women. The serving of the luncheon was slow, and it was almost 2 o'clock when the Hon. Wm. Fuller arose, and, for the Democratic Club, welcomed the guest, and at once introduced Mayor Stuller, who extended the city's welcome.

Government and People.
At the meeting at the arch, George Fred Williams finished an address just as Mr. Bryan entered the log grandstand amid great applause. Mr. Bryan was introduced during deafening applause and spoke for nearly an hour to a big audience of nearly three-quarters of an hour. He said, among other things:

"I have found that the government is, to a very large extent, an accurate reflection of the people. Where there is where there is great ignorance there is usually very bad government. Where the people are not trained to studies and to the use of the ballot, they do not understand the issues, they are taken advantage of by those that do understand.

"And I have been encouraged to find that everywhere there is a tendency to improve where there is opportunity. For it means that there will also be growth in the government towards perfection.

"Now, to-day, the Democratic party has

Declared Reception Big Event in Any Man's Life

NEW YORK, August 21.—William J. Bryan, despite the strain of yesterday's last night, rose early this morning. He was up and about shortly after 6 o'clock. Though he said he felt fine and was smiling when the newspaper men visited him, he could not deny the look of weariness in his face, breathing by the strain of his reception and the incidents connected with it.

Mr. Bryan was in his shirt sleeves and slippers when he received the reporters. He was asked to give his opinion of opinion regarding last night's greet-

But he said he preferred not to talk of it. It had filled his heart with emotion, he said, and was a matter so personal and dear to him that it was difficult to express an opinion in words.

Pressed for some word to the people regarding the reception, Mr. Bryan finally said:

"It would be the big event in the life of any man to face what I faced last night. I was more than pleased with the result. I tried to put into those words I learned convey my meaning, and I am confident that I did not fail. My words are insufficient. I think you know how grateful I feel for the welcome I received last night. I said so to that sea of faces in the Garden last night, and I really meant it."

Mr. Bryan said he would make no formal statement on any subject, political or otherwise.

While Mr. Bryan was talking to his early morning callers and opening his mail, Mrs. Bryan came in for a few

After a short halt, Mr. Bryan continued on his way to the East is that they could find out the exact time of the great results from the fact that they were not getting together and arranging things for the masses. I believe now, as I have always believed in the past, that the people are capable of thinking for themselves, believe in their own thinking and acting for themselves, in that way they got the best results."

The trip from the Hotel Victoria to the Grand Central depot was made in a carriage. Mr. Bryan boarded a special car attached to the New York and New Haven over the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad. Mr. Bryan boarded the rear platform of the car, and seated himself, numbering several hundred on the station platform. The train left at 10:06.

First Stop at Stamford.

STAMFORD, CONN., August 21.—The first stop of Mr. Bryan's train was at Stamford, and here he made a brief, but not an unnecessary pause, as the train was fifteen minutes behind its scheduled time. A large number of people were gathered, but they only had a few minutes of Mr. Bryan. The reason for this was that the train was stopped at the station and in a place which could only reached by a foot bridge. In passing, the crowd sweltered a hundred people got to the rear platform and heard Mr. Bryan speak. He said: "Ladies and gentlemen, I wish to say a few words to you, but I do not think it enough to enter upon the discussion of any subject. I'll come back here in a few days and talk with Mr. Bryan smiling and bowing."

Small Crowd at Bridgeport.
BRIDGEPORT, CONN., AUGUST 23.—The train on which Mr. Bryan is traveling here tonight is crowded with people. Mr. Bryan did not speak. Only a small crowd gathered, and the demonstration was confined to a few persons. The presence of a large flag by a woman, Mr. Bryan waved his hat toward the woman.

Mr. Reid Improving.
The friends of Mr. H. H. Reid will be glad to know that he is improving after his recent illness. The Murphy's Hotel some weeks ago. Mr. Reid is probably unable to be out in a few weeks.
